The Choice of Stereographs.

The value of Stereograph Libraries is today recognized by the foremost educators of the country. Books describe places, scenes, subjects,—but it is the mission of the stereograph to reproduce with absolute fidelity the thing itself, presenting the reality, not an imitation, so that the mind receives the same impression as in the bodily presence of the object,—an imprint that is never effaced.

In purchasing a collection of stereographs, do not make the mistake of choosing a miscellaneous collection comprising a diversity of subjects. Such a purchase cannot possibly compare in value with comprehensively and logically arranged series covering specific subjects or places.

Our series large and small are prepared by men who, from their experience and knowledge of the subjects, are eminently fitted for the work. All series are so arranged and numbered that the stereograph traveler visits the scenes and places precisely as he would do in the actual tour.

Whether making the purchase for pleasure or profit, it is for your interest to choose series, not a heterogeneous collection. Your pleasure will be increased, your profit multiplied many fold.

UNITED STATES SERIES

100 Stereographs.

The idea is too prevalent that one must go abroad to behold the finest scenery and the greatest natural wonders. This marvelous travel-series on our own country convinces the most skeptical how erroneous is such a conception. No other country embraces such a variety of scenery or so many wonders of nature.

Beginning with New York, its towering buildings and busy thoroughfares, passing up the beautiful Hudson to historic New England, we journey to Niagara, mightiest of waterfalls. Then touching briefly at intervening points we reach Washington, "the city of magnificent distances," of which we justly make a careful study.

From the National Capital, we pass to the sunny South, with its orange and rubber trees, its tropic foliage and trailing mosses, through old New Orleans, to the great illimitable West. Pike's Peak, the Garden of the Gods and characteristic mining scenes attract us in Colorado, and its canyons prepare us somewhat for the mighty grandeur of the Grand Canyon of Arizona, which we soon visit.

In California, the huge trees of the Mariposa Grove, snow-crowned Mt. Shasta and the glories of the Yosemite are given due attention. We then turn north to the great Columbia River, with its salmon canning, stop at the copper mines of Butte and on to the Wonderland of the World, Yellowstone National Park. Returning east, Chicago with its busy streets and immense stock yards is visited, and our tour ends with Pittsburg and a glimpse of Niagara in its winter glory.

NIAGARA SERIES.

18 Stereographs.

Most impressive and majestic natural wonder, Niagara holds the traveler spellbound, no matter how many times it is visited. This marvelous sight is unparalleled in the world, and one cannot study too carefully its mighty grandeur. The American Falls is of greater height, 167 feet, while the Canadian has the greater volume of water. Fifteen million cubic feet per minute pours over the two falls. The Cave of the Winds, the Gorge and the Whirlpool are no less wonderful in their way and are here presented in their natural sequence.

- (1) 321 General view of the Falls from Upper Steel Arch Bridge.—Steamer "Maid of the Mist" at the landing.
- (2) 322 Mighty Niagara.—The brink of the American Falls from Prospect Point.
- (3) 323 Luna Falls and Island and the American Falls from Goat Island.

COTTON INDUSTRY SERIES.

18 Stereographs.

Not often as we put on and off our many articles of clothing made of cotton do we stop to think whence comes the supply of raw material, or by what process it is brought to the state which renders it suitable, serviceable and attractive for garments of all sorts and for all uses. Because we are so thoughtless, the study of this series presenting the important phases of the cotton industry is especially enlightening. We see the fields of the plantations white with cotton ready for the pickers, the ginney where the fibre and seeds are separated, the pressing, baling and weighing. Then entering one of the huge new mills of the South, we watch the evolution of the cotton into finished cloth, through the many processes of opening, lapping, carding, drawing, spinning, spooling, beaming, sizing and weaving. All the operations are performed with the aid of the most improved modern machinery in a mill so large that more than 135,000 yards of finished cloth are produced daily. As the greater part of the cotton crop is transported to the mills of the North or shipped abroad to supply the foreign market a scene on the busy cotton levee of New Orleans (No. 805), brings home to us the immensity of the cotton industry and a realization of what its development means to the new South.

COAL AND COKE SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

Of the great sources of wealth in the United States, our extensive coal fields are of first importance. Not only do they supply fuel for the millions of America, but they make possible the tremendous iron and steel industries in which our country leads the world. In this series we visit one of the soft coal mines in the neighborhood of Pittsburgh, see the miners at their work boring for blasts, shoveling the mined coal, moving trains of loaded cars, and the exterior scenes at the tippie where the coal is weighed and loaded into cars or boats on the Monongahela River. Another most interesting branch of the industry is the converting the coal into coke for use in blast furnaces. The coke ovens we inspect are those of Starkville, Colo., where we see the important processes of putting in a charge and pulling an oven.

This series consists of the following stereographs: 13215, 13216, 13217, 13218, 13219, 13220, 13221, 13222, 13223, 13224 from the foregoing Pennsylvania list and 12427 and 12428 from the Colorado list.

Where does the meat come from that supplies our tables day by day? Most of us think of the local market as the source and reflect no further on the subject. Yet the local market has no slaughter house, no facilities for dressing and preserving large quantities of meat. The fact is that the greater part of the beef, lamb and pork consumed in even the little villages all over the country, comes from the great packing houses of Chicago or their branches in other cities. A visit to one of the huge plants for which Chicago is famous cannot fail to give us a new and surprising conception of the magnitude of this industry. Here we follow the course of the animals from the time when they are sold "on the hoof" by the Western ranchman, through the processes of knocking, dressing, washing, refrigerating and preparing the by-products for the market. Here is a business where Yankee ingenuity and scientific knowledge have evolved a system so admirable that we are fascinated by the perfection of its results, and we are proud to think that it is typical of the business enterprise of our country.

GRAND CANYON SERIES.

24 Stereographs.

Sometimes nature forces us to admire her for her surpassing loveliness, sometimes it is a grandeur almost oppressive which commands our admiration. Of the latter type is the Grand Canyon of Arizona. In the Eocene epoch this whole region was subject to a vast upheaval, when these stupendous gorges, towering walls and lofty terraces were formed. The Canyon is a most enlightening chapter in geology, a rich and informing section from the history of the earth's formation. It is 5,000 to 6,000 feet deep and 217 miles long and is believed to have been formed by the erosive action of the Colorado River, while the plateau is the result of successive upheavals accompanied by volcanic action. While geologists must necessarily most appreciate the scientific significance of the region, none can fail to be impressed by this most remarkable region on earth. As we stand upon the rim and gaze down thousands of feet into the abysmal depths of the Canyon, watch storms arise and spend themselves in the mighty chambers of the gorges, or climb the precipitous trails that lead through its mazes, we are filled with awe and wonder and endeavor to picture to ourselves the tremendous cataclysm of nature which wrought these marvels.

Yellowstone Park Series.

100 Stereographs.

Absolutely unique in its comprehensive and detailed presentation of the great National Park of Yellowstone, this series is quite incomparable. From the station where the traveler alights, to be taken by stage through this wonderland of wonderlands, marvel after marvel unfolds before our view. The huge hotels and the fort are the only features which in any way resemble the ordinary sights of travel. At Mammoth Hot Springs the cones of two extinct geysers attract attention, and the wonderful formation of the several terraces are seen. Then Norris Basin, the Lower Geyser Basin, with their lesser geysers and boiling springs, to Old Faithful, the most beautiful geyser in the Park, which rises to a height of 150 feet at intervals of about 65 minutes. Yellowstone Lake is one of the largest bodies of water at so high an altitude, and is of great natural beauty. The Grand Canyon is another of the commanding marvels of the Park, having a depth of from 600 to 1,200 feet. And all through this vast territory roam the animals of the Rockies, protected by the government from being hunted, and becoming so tame that bear, buffalo and deer are common sights near the big hotels. In no other series is so much that is wonderful and at the same time of surpassing beauty united to make an irresistible appeal to every taste.

BIG TREES SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

In Mariposa Grove are preserved by the State of California the greatest of the huge trees which once covered this part of the country. The Grizzly Giant is 31 feet in diameter, one limb being 6½ feet through; the Wawona, 27 feet in diameter, has been tunneled to permit the road to pass through, the opening being 10 feet high by 9½ feet wide. The fallen giant by the road, with a dozen mounted cavalymen on its trunk, will give a clear idea of the tremendous size of these forest monarchs.

YOSEMITE VALLEY SERIES.

24 Stereographs.

In sublimity and beauty, Yosemite is unsurpassed by any mountain valley in the world, no single valley combining in so limited a space such a wonderful variety of grand and romantic scenery. The nearly vertical walls of rock by which it is enclosed are from 3,000 to 5,000 feet high, and over these beautiful water-falls are precipitated into the valley below. El Capitan, Half Dome, Glacier Point and Cathedral Rocks are among the most notable cliffs and these are strikingly portrayed in this series. Yosemite Falls is the highest in the world with anything like the same volume of water, but Vernal and Nevada Falls are also very grand and beautiful. The series ends with some glorious views of the high Sierras from the Summit of Cloud's Rest.

ASCENT OF MT. HOOD SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

Mt. Hood, which might be called America's Matterhorn, is reached by a stage drive through a wild and picturesque country, to Cloud Cap Inn, from which the ascent is made on foot. Over the wide expanse of snow and ice, which forms Elliot glacier, with huge crevasses and mountains of ice, the daring traveler climbs. The last half mile to the summit is up a nearly perpendicular stretch of snow, which is made with the aid of a rope which has been attached to a rock near the top, and as an added precaution, the climbers are roped together, since a careless step would result in almost certain death. The view from the top is magnificent, embracing the whole of the Cascade range and many peaks stretching away to the Pacific.

This series consists of the following numbers selected from the foregoing Oregon list.
(1) 12533, (2) 12534, (3) 12535, (4) 12536, (5) 12537, (6) 12538, (7) 12539, (8) 12540,

LUMBERING SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

One of the most important and interesting of the great industries of the country is presented in this series. First, felling the tree, a huge pine 4 feet in diameter; then hauling the huge trunk by means of an iron cable attached to a donkey engine, to the railway running to the saw-mill, a distance of 8 miles; the busy saw-mill which converts the logs into sawed lumber, each piece of which drops into a flume which carries it rushing down a distance of six miles in twenty minutes' time to the lumber yard, where it is piled until shipped by rail to all parts of the country. Another part of the industry is shown in the huge rafts of logs, which are floated down the Columbia to the ocean and thence towed to San Francisco. The completed raft here given contains 65,000 logs 125 feet in length.

This series consists of the following numbers selected from the foregoing Oregon and Washington lists.

(1) 12524, (2) 12525, (3) 12526, (4) 12527, (5) 12528, (6) 12529, (7) 12530, (8) 12531,

JAMAICA SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

The principal islands of the British West Indies, Jamaica, is rapidly becoming a most popular winter resort, to which thousands from the United States and from England flock every winter. Orange groves and sugar and coffee plantations, flowers, cascades and gorges abound everywhere. To the beauty of Jamaica's lofty and rugged mountains is added a luxuriance of tropical vegetation, perhaps nowhere excelled.

Included in this series are scenes from a delightful trip on pony back to Blue Mountain Peak, the highest point on the island. Native life abounds in this series, and is an important factor in making it a most attractive, entertaining and instructive tour. The series includes several interesting and picturesque scenes at sea via Atlas Line service, New York to Jamaica.

WEST INDIES CRUISE SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

The winter cruises of the great Hamburg-American Line to the summer seas and lands of the West Indies have within the past few years become extremely popular. This series covers a delightful cruise of about 25 days' duration on the magnificent cruising steamer Prinzessin Victoria Luise to the West Indies and Spanish Main. The events of recent years have drawn much attention to the various islands of the Antilles and also to Venezuela, and this cruise is therefore of great popular interest.

We coal ship at St. Thomas of the Danish West Indies, and here get our first view of tropical verdure. We find many things of interest in ancient San Juan; see the terrible results of the eruption of Mont Pelee at St. Pierre, and make a most fascinating inland trip to Caracas, the capital of Venezuela. Returning northward, we stop at quaint Curacao, and find many extremely attractive and picturesque scenes in Jamaica, and in the Gem of the Antilles, Cuba. We end our tour feeling that we have not only enjoyed our "trip," but have also richly profited through the knowledge gained of the Gardens of the Caribbees and our South American neighbor, Venezuela.

Note.—The following subjects appear in title list on various places represented in this series. They are again listed here to show just what stereographs embrace the Cruise.

CANADA SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

All too little do we appreciate the great country which lies north of us. To some, its forests, lakes and rivers constitute a huntsman's paradise, and many have visited the famous cities of the eastern provinces, but the grand scenery of the Canadian Rockies is much less known. Toronto, the "Queen City" is our first point of interest in this tour. Then the picturesque voyage down the St. Lawrence to Montreal, the largest and most important commercial city in the Dominion. Still farther down the River we journey to Quebec, of which it has been said: "Unex-ampled for picturesqueness and magnificence of position on the American continent, and for romance of historic associations, Quebec sits on her impregnable heights, a queen among the cities of the New World." Turning westward again, we stop to visit the capital, Ottawa; then on through Lakes Huron and Superior to Fort William; from thence to Winnipeg and on to the far West, where we do full justice to the grand beauty of the Canadian Rockies in Alberta and the equal majesty of the Selkirk, in British Columbia, ending our trip at Vancouver, on the Pacific Coast.

ENGLAND SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

This series embraces in a wonderfully complete and comprehensive manner all that is best of the manifold historic, architectural and natural beauties of a country peculiarly rich in these interests. Giving due prominence to the varied sights of the world's metropolis, London, its famous Houses of Parliament, monuments, royal palaces and abbey, it includes Canterbury, immortalized by the poetry of Chaucer, the historic site of the battle of Hastings, the Isle of Wight, Salisbury, with its beautiful cathedral, Stonehenge, relic of a pagan age, Cornwall and Land's End, the university town of Oxford, Warwick, with its fine old feudal castle, Kenilworth, made familiar to all by Scott's romance, the home of the world's greatest poet and dramatist, Shakespeare's birth-place, the picturesque Stratford-on-Avon; Worcester, Ludlow, Shrewsbury, to Chester on the River Dee; then the principal sights of North Wales, its ancient castles, immense slate quarries and wild scenery; Liverpool, where our steamships unload their burdens of passengers and freight; then north England with Furness Abbey, Derwentwater, loveliest of English lakes; York, with its renowned minster, and turning once more to the South, Lincoln, one of the most ancient of English cities, boasting perhaps the fairest cathedral of all.

Thus are all the most celebrated and interesting sights brought before us, clearly depicted, worthy our most careful study and forming a tour of unexampled interest and profit.

Even a brief visit to the world's greatest city contains much that is of highest interest and profit. The busy Strand, great artery of traffic; the Bank of England, Houses of Parliament and famous Westminster Abbey, vie in interest with the royal palaces, Buckingham and Windsor, and the frowning walls of the Tower, around which cluster so many dark scenes of England's history. These and other realistic views command most careful study and prove of utmost attraction.

SCOTLAND AND IRELAND SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

From every point of view this series commands special attention. Glasgow on the Clyde, the commercial and industrial capital of Scotland; the curious natural features of Staffa, Island of Pillars and Fingals Cave; Iona, where Scotland's ancient kings are buried beneath rude monuments and runic crosses, to the Highlands with their beautiful lakes and mountains made famous and dear by the fiction and poetry of Scott; Edinburgh and its environs, each scene a page of Scottish history; the great Forth Bridge; the home and country of Burns,—all these vie in interest with the unique sights of the Giant's Causeway across the channel in Ireland; Galway and its fishing villages; Dublin, largest and finest of Irish cities; the quaint peasant life of County Kerry, lovely Killarney with its wild and romantic scenery; Cork on the River Lee,—

"The spreading Lee that, like an island fair,

to Queenstown, the Port of Call, for mail steamers. A diversified and fascinating collection embodying all phases of human life with much that is most attractive and beautiful in nature.

SCOTTISH HIGHLANDS SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

Here are grouped the most beautiful and romantic scenes in Scotland, and the traveler realizes how strongly they must have appealed to the imagination of the poet and novelist, Sir Walter Scott. Almost every name suggests a passage from his poetry, and we seem to live through the tragic scenes which form the theme of "Lady of the Lake."

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the foregoing Scotland series.
 (1) 2777, (2) 2785, (3) 2786, (4) 2787, (5) 2774, (6) 2773, (7) 2775, (8) 2788, (9) 2776, (10) 2789, (11) 2790, (12) 2791.

LAKES OF KILLARNEY SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

The great loveliness and charm of the scenery around the Lakes of Killarney is due to the exquisite combination of mountains clothed with luxuriant foliage and the expanse of water, dotted with numerous islets. Under its spell Moore wrote of "Sweet Innisfallen," a spot of exceeding beauty. Ross Castle, the picturesque bridge of Bricken and Muckross Abbey all contribute their charm to the tour, and a glimpse of a country cabin and an interior, afford a vivid touch of life.

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the foregoing Ireland series.
 (1) 2660, (2) 2682, (3) 2701, (4) 2702, (5) 2663, (6) 2680, (7) 2703, (8) 2665, (9) 2704, (10) 2681, (11) 2678, (12) 2679.

BRITISH ISLES SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

A series made up of choice subjects covering England, Scotland and Ireland, necessarily omitting much that is of interest which the more detailed tour is able to present, yet giving a most satisfactory and comprehensive study of these three countries which abound in picturesque scenes and historic associations. The route is similar to that followed in the separate series—London, Canterbury, Isle of Wight, Salisbury, Cornwall, Oxford, Stratford-on-Avon, Chester, North Wales, Liverpool and a few scenes of North England. In Scotland—the Borderland, the home of Sir Walter Scott, Edinburgh and environs, the Highlands with their lovely lakes, and quaint Ayrshire, the home of Burns. In Ireland we visit the famous Giant's Causeway, then Dublin, the handsomest of Irish cities. A glimpse or two of peasant life and "by Killarney's lakes and fells," to Cork and Queenstown, there ending a tour of unusual interest and beauty.

This series is made up of a comprehensive selection from the England and Scotland and Ireland Series.

FJORDS AND WATERFALLS OF NORWAY.

12 Stereographs.

So pronouncedly picturesque are the fjords and waterfalls of Norway that we can scarcely think of the country without calling up a vision of a fair bit of harbor enclosed by rugged and precipitous mountain sides, or foaming waterfalls plunging down from their glacial sources. The fjords and waterfalls are the most notable in the world.

STOCKHOLM SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

Stockholm is deemed one of the most beautiful capital cities of Europe, and it is called the Venice of the North, since it is built partly on the continent and partly on nine holms or islands. The royal palace contains magnificent interiors. The exterior and interior of this palace are beautifully shown in this series, as well as the public gardens, wide, even streets, the fine quays and other sights which constitute the attractions of Stockholm.

RUSSIA SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

This travel-series on the Land of the Czar presents in a very complete and interesting manner the chief sights of the great cities, St. Petersburg and Moscow, Nijni-Novgorod, with its huge commercial fair, together with less important towns and much of native life, giving a most realistic impression of the country. Helsingfors, with its crowded markets, handsome churches and streets, gives a glimpse of the life of the sturdy Finns; then St. Petersburg, built upon the marshes at the mouth of the Neva River and made capital by the command of Peter the Great, is visited and its grand churches, beautiful streets and palaces admired; Moscow, one of the oldest of Russian cities and for centuries the capital of the Empire, with its Kremlin, a fortress within the city, containing cathedrals, towers and the royal palace. Here the Emperors always have been and still are crowned with splendid pomp. Then Nijni-Novgorod, of which the principal attraction is its huge fair, where merchants from all over the Empire bring their wares, so that millions of dollars' worth of goods are shown. Kief and Warsaw, capital of Poland, round out a tour of exceptional value and interest.

ST. PETERSBURG SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

A tour of St. Petersburg should prove of unusual interest, since the eyes of all the world have been turned upon the Czar and his people in recent times. From the Dome of St. Isaac's Cathedral the whole plan of the city may be seen. St. Petersburg might be called a city of palaces, dominated by the Imperial Winter Palace, the largest royal palace in the world. Two other Imperial palaces are shown in this series, that at Tsarskoe-Selo and that of Peterhof, whose avenue of fountains forms one of the most remarkable sights to be conceived.

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the foregoing Russia series.

MOSCOW SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

Moscow, formerly the capital of Russia, and still the scene of the coronation of emperors and of the most important religious ceremonies, is unique in many ways. Its Kremlin, a strongly walled fortress in the heart of the city, can be compared to nothing in other cities, unless to the Acropolis at Athens. Within this walled enclosure are situated the most important public buildings, the royal palace and treasury, the arsenal, a monastery and the Cathedral of the Assumption, where the emperors are crowned. Other significant sights given in this series are the Kitai Gorod, the great vegetable market, the Temple of our Saviour and a Procession from one of the characteristic religious ceremonies of the church.

FRANCE SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

Although Paris is not all of France, we cannot think of the country without a vision of its most wonderful city. Hence its beautiful streets and boulevards, its theatres, palaces, grand hotels and public buildings, command our first and fullest consideration, since here the most significant events in French history have taken place and a few of the most prominent sights of the Exposition are included, as many of its features were permanent. After Paris, the royal palaces of Versailles and Fontainebleau, which witnessed the most gorgeous and extravagant spectacles in which even royalty ever indulged, are fully shown. South France, the Riviera and Monaco, all possessing great natural beauty, to which has been added all that men could do to increase the charm, Marseilles and the French Alps combine to furnish a tour of great variety and value.

In many ways, Germany offers more allurements to the traveler than any other country. What longing seizes one at the mere mention of the Rhine, Heidelberg, Cologne or Nuremberg! Our travel-series opens at Hamburg, the principal port of the country, where steamers land their hordes of passengers each year; thence to Berlin, the dignified capital of the Fatherland, filled with sights which command our warmest admiration; Potsdam, where Frederick the Great sought relief from the cares of state in his charming little palace of Sans Souci. Then Dresden, Leipzig, Brunswick, Hildesheim and Hanover, to Cologne, with its beautiful cathedral. Next, the Rhine, with its vine-clad slopes and ruined castles, to Heidelberg, then Nuremberg, birthplace of dolls and toys, and Munich, capital of Bavaria and ending in the beautiful Bavarian Highlands.

BERLIN SERIES.

While a prolonged and careful tour of the capital of the Fatherland would be found full of profit and entertainment, yet the chief characteristics of the city are brought out in this small series. The palace of the Emperor, the Imperial Museum and the Royal Church are three structures of special magnificence, Blucher and Belle Alliance Places serve to show the handsome streets, as well as the famous Unter den Linden. A scene peculiarly German is that in the celebrated Kroll's Beer Garden, one of the finest and most widely known beer gardens in the empire. The work of the present Emperor in decorating Berlin's great park, the Thiergarten, is shown by the beautiful Sieges Allee, adorned with its many fine statues of German heroes; while the unique little palace of Sans Souci, at Potsdam, closes the series.

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the foregoing Germany series.

- (1) 2100, (2) 2107, (3) 2106, (4) 2103, (5) 2104, (6) 2101, (7) 2112, (8) 2113, (9) 2118, (10) 2110, (11) 2102, (12) 2119.

THE RHINE AND ITS CASTLES.

Perhaps no one locality is more famous in song and story than the Rhine, every mile having its myth, its romance, its tradition. It would be impossible to present the whole of a trip in the limits of a small series, and the most strikingly beautiful scenes are therefore selected to represent the tour in brief. Surely, nothing could be more picturesque than this lovely river as seen through Roland's vineclad arch, with Drachenfels Mountain in the distance. Or the many castles, some in ruins, some with their walls repaired and made habitable by modern wealth, perched on the banks above the river, and adding greatly to the charm of the view. And always we note the slopes of the steep river banks are terraced into vineyards, for here is the home of the Rhine wine, famous the world over.

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the Germany series:

- (1) 2222, (2) 2221, (3) 2200, (4) 2204, (5) 2209, (6) 2231, (7) 2238, (8) 2198, (9) 2197, (10) 2235, (11) 2236, (12) 2237.

THE BAVARIAN HIGHLANDS SERIES.

The scenery of the Bavarian Highlands has a beauty of its own, like and yet unlike that of the Scottish Highlands. Here the mountains tower in regal grandeur, reminding the beholder of their near neighbors, the Swiss Alps. King Ludwig II., known as the mad King, here built his castle of Neuschwanstein, and Linderhof, a less pretentious but favorite retreat of the King. Beside the majestic beauty of the mountains and lakes, unusual attraction is given to this series by the vivid touches of life shown, as the hay-makers at work in their fields, a peasant home in the heart of the mountains, peasants in their national costume, and a good old Bavarian Highlander to complete the series.

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the Germany series:

- (1) 2165, (2) 2259, (3) 2258, (4) 2262, (5) 2260, (6) 2161, (7) 2265, (8) 2166, (9) 2168, (10) 2167, (11) 2169, (12) 2266.

ITALY SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

This travel-series is a marvel of completeness and interest, more varied and full of all that is beautiful and artistic, perhaps, than any other is or could be made; for in no other land are grouped so many masterpieces of painting, sculpture and architecture, in addition to unequaled beauty of natural scenery. In Rome, alone, each age has its especial glory, recent archaeological research having disclosed ruins of majestic buildings which were old when the Christian era began, while every century since has added its quota to the grandeur of the Eternal City. Scarcely less alluring in a far different way is Venice, the espoused of the sea, where magnificent architecture is set off by the charm of quaint water ways and winding canals. Sunny Naples, with its picturesque Lazzaroni, fiery Vesuvius, Pompeii, resurrected from a dead past to show us what life was like in the first century; the Sorrento Peninsula, with its wild and rugged scenery, and the lakes and cities of Northern Italy, all offer much that is classic and beautiful, appealing alike to the student and the seeker after entertainment.

THE POPE AND HIS HOME SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

An especially interesting series, showing Pope Pius X. standing before the Papal Throne in the Audience Room in the Vatican Palace. The other views give us insight of the marvelous beauty of St. Peter's Church and the Vatican Palace and are all of great interest. Each stereograph has full descriptions on the back and a special map of St. Peter's and the Vatican is furnished.

ROME SERIES.

24 Stereographs.

So much that is rich and varied, for the student and for the mere sightseer is to be found in Rome that even by enlarging the series to twice the usual size it scarce serves to justly represent the city. St. Peter's church and the Vatican palace command first attention; then the Tiber, the Bridge and Castle St. Angelo. The Pantheon is next visited, being possibly the best example of ancient architecture in the city. Other ruins of the Rome of the Caesars are to be found in the Great Forum, unearthed by archaeologists in recent years. The Colosseum brings to mind a crowd of historic associations, the Martyrdom of Christians, the combats of gladiators. Masterpieces of art, beautiful interiors of ancient and modern buildings and the ruins of the Applan way, all contribute to the attractiveness of this choice series of the Eternal City.

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the Italy series:

- (1) 1628, (2) 1621, (3) 1623, (4) 1636, (5) 1638, (6) 1637, (7) 1605, (8) 1601, (9) 1662, (10) 1603, (11) 1604, (12) 1615, (13) 1614, (14) 1665, (15) 1666, (16) 1668, (17) 1617, (18) 1680, (19) 1608, (20) 1631, (21) 1633, (22) 1632, (23) 1650, (24) 1630.

VENICE SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

Other cities are built wholly or in part upon islands, elsewhere we find canals and lagoons answering the purpose of streets, yet nowhere in all the world is the charm and picturesqueness of Venice reproduced to any appreciable degree. The reason is not far to seek. In the history of the republic is everywhere manifest the steady determination of her sons that "Venice should be great, beautiful above all the thoughts of other races, that her splendor should outdo every rival." A law is said to have existed at one time that no ship should return from the Orient without some treasure to enrich St. Mark's. Hence we find this gem of architecture embellished with columns, carvings and rich adornment rifled from Constantinople and every coast city of Asia Minor. Her famous Bridge of Sighs, her Campanile, beautiful palaces all enhanced and made picturesque by gleaming water ways, compose a series of incomparable interest and charm.

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the foregoing Italy series:

- (1) 1771, (2) 1774, (3) 1776, (4) 1785, (5) 1782, (6) 1783, (7) 1854, (8) 1775, (9) 1777, (10) 1787, (11) 1770, (12) 1853.

POMPEII AND VICINITY.

12 Stereographs.

In the year 79 A. D. Pompeii lay like a fair, white gem at the foot of Mount Vesuvius. Owing to its charming location and delightful climate the city had become a favorite resort of wealthy Romans, many of whom, including Cicero, owned handsome villas in the suburbs. Then came the terrific eruption of the volcano in the year 79, which completely overwhelmed not only Pompeii but Herculaneum and Stabiae, adjacent towns. By and by the memory of Pompeii was forgotten and for centuries its site was unknown. At last, in 1689, some ruins were discovered which led to the extensive excavations which have revealed to the world the social, domestic and public life of an ancient people, their architecture, paintings and sculpture and resulted in the complete resurrection of the beautiful and wealthy city of the first century. Our series depicts the most interesting features of this buried city and its destroyer, the smoking Vesuvius.

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the foregoing Italy series:

- (1) 1701, (2) 1716, (3) 1718, (4) 1719, (5) 1719, (6) 1726, (7) 1725, (8) 1815, (9) 1721, (10) 1722, (11) 1814, (12) 1724.

NAPLES AND ENVIRONS SERIES.

18 Stereographs.

The fame of Naples rests almost wholly upon the surpassing loveliness of its surroundings. It is preeminently a city "beautiful for situation." Facing the magnificent Bay, the Islands of Ischia and Capri in the distance, Vesuvius frowning in ominous grandeur a few miles away, the city commands the admiration of the world to-day as surely as it has done during all the centuries of its existence. Our series includes not only the town and its sights, but a trip to Vesuvius and the interesting ruins of buried Pompeii.

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the foregoing Italy series:

- (1) 1701, (2) 1708, (3) 1703, (4) 1702, (5) 1705, (6) 1707, (7) 1708, (8) 1716, (9) 1718, (10) 1720, (11) 1719, (12) 1721, (13) 1725, (14) 1722, (15) 1726, (16) 1729, (17) 1731, (18) 1732.

FLORENCE SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

Florence takes front rank with Rome, Venice and Naples as most attractive and interesting among the Italian cities. Not only natural and architectural beauties draw the traveler thither. "Each street of Florence contains a world of art; the walls of the city are the calyx containing the fairest flowers of the human mind; and this is but the richest gem in the diadem with which the Italian people have adorned the earth."

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the foregoing Italy series:

VIENNA TO THE ORIENT SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

One of the most splendid cities of Europe, the capital of Austria, is here presented in careful detail, its handsome streets, its palaces, theatres, museum, churches and market-places are clearly depicted. Then passing to Budapest, on the Danube, in Hungary, and Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, where we mingle with the Bulgarian peasants in their curious costumes, Constantinople, at the threshold of Asia is reached. Now in Europe, now in Asia, the streets of this strange Oriental city give a kaleidoscopic impression of every nation under heaven. In spite of the strict interdict of the Sultan, the mosques and palaces, the streets and the ever changing cosmopolitan life of the Turkish capital are faithfully portrayed.

VIENNA SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

This attractive series on Vienna, the capital of Austria, presents the most notable sights of the city in the most realistic manner. The imperial theatre and opera house, the city hall or Rathhaus, the museum, churches and palaces are exceptionally fine examples of architecture. Equally interesting are the fine interiors of the Palace of the prince of Liechtenstein, the Hofburg Theatre and the splendid Reception Hall of the Rathhaus.

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the foregoing Austria series. (1) 4501, (2) 4532, (3) 4530, (4) 4508, (5) 4515, (6) 4520, (7) 4512, (8) 4513, (9) 4518, (10) 4504, (11) 4538, (12) 4548.

CONSTANTINOPLE SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

In this ancient city the traveler has the novel experience of passing from one continent to another within the city limits. The greater part of the city is on the European side, to be sure, but Skutari, the largest suburb, is beautifully situated on the Asiatic Shore and from thence we may look across the waters of the Bosphorus to Stamboul and Pera on the European Shore.

The Outer Bridge across the Golden Horn is always a place of great interest, for here mingle the peoples of every nation in the world. The many fine mosques which embellish the city stand out in almost every scene, and of especial interest is the glimpse we gain of a mosque interior, since unbelievers are not welcomed to Mohammedan places of worship.

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the foregoing Turkey series. (1) 4301, (2) 4302, (3) 4310, (4) 4311, (5) 4308, (6) 4312, (7) 4326, (8) 4325, (9) 4322, (10) 4330, (11) 4335, (12) 4340.

GREECE SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

To those who have respect to "the glory that was Greece," who appreciate that which is of highest historic and artistic value, this travel series will appeal irresistibly. Interwoven with the Greece of to-day are ever recurring glimpses of that glorious past of artistic and intellectual supremacy which has made Greece the instructor of all the world for ages. Classic Athens, though despoiled of many of her choicest treasures of sculpture and art, yet rears her immortal Acropolis aloft, crowned with the ruined splendor of her most glorious examples of architecture and sculpture, and throughout the city the enduring triumph of Greek art is everywhere manifest. From Athens to the monasteries of North Greece is a leap of several centuries in point of time. Perched on their inaccessible cliffs, these relics of mediæval religious fervor stand out in solemn majesty, still housing their monks, though few in number. Not less interesting are the ruins of Olympia, Epidaurus or ancient Mycenæ, while the many scenes from modern Greece, showing the peasants tilling their fields, with rude and primitive implements, or meeting in their Easter dancing festival at Megara serve to unite the past with the present.

ATHENS SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

Although more than two thousand years have elapsed since Athens was at the zenith of her glory, time has spared to us ample evidence of her right to pre-eminence in all that is highest in art. The Acropolis still crowns the city, bearing on its lofty platform the noblest pieces of architecture the world has ever known, and the Parthenon remains one of the wonders of the world. Near the Acropolis, and now but a bare and rugged pile of rock, lies Mars Hill, very different from that Areopagus existing when St. Paul's visit to Athens was made. The Temples of Theseus and that of the Olympian Jupiter are the principal objects of interest outside the Acropolis, and bear witness to that enthusiastic love of the beautiful which animated the Athenians, turning their religion into an art.

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the foregoing Greece series.
 (1) 4101, (2) 4201, (3) 4102, (4) 4131, (5) 4120, (6) 4126, (7) 4115, (8) 4125, (9) 4128, (10) 4135, (11) 4138, (12) 4203.

EGYPT SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

This tour sets forth the Land of Pharaohs in the most graphic manner, with its pyramids, its colossi, its obelisks, and its marvels in temple building. In a country where the history of ages is written upon stone, archaeology must necessarily be a paramount feature, and the ruins of Egypt form an attractive study scarcely equalled by the vivid touches of the life of the present day. Alexandria and Cairo, though offering many quaint and curious sights, yet evidence the influence of European occupation, and are not wholly unlike other cities. But beyond we find naught but the mighty works of men whose grandeur has departed and whose names are forgotten. Along the western bank of the Nile, Memphis, Abydos, Dendera, Karnak, Luxor, Thebes and Philae, all rear their gigantic temples and colonnades, carved and sculptured records of the deeds and conquests of a once mighty nation.

CAIRO SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

In this small series on Cairo are strangely mingled the ancient and modern, the earliest existing works from the hand of man and scenes from the life of to-day. The beautiful Indian Palm Grove forms part of a modern public garden; Arab Runners are posted at the gates of a modern hotel; the mosques and the street scenes are of the present day, although possessing their own unique attraction. But when we turn to those gigantic Pyramids and the Sphinx, the centuries roll back and we are lost in wonder at those mighty works of the earliest ages of history. Then once more we are brought back to the present day by the curious spectacle presented by the Holy Carpet parade, when devoted Mohammedans leave the city bearing rich rugs to the tomb of the prophet in Arabia.

This series consists of the following stereographs selected from the foregoing Egypt series. (1) 1019, (2) 1103, (3) 1031, (4) 1037, (5) 1026, (6) 1027, (7) 1101, (8) 1017, (9) 1008, (10) 1007, (11) 1009, (12) 1035.

PALESTINE SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

A trip through the Holy Land has been the heart's desire of many a person for a lifetime, and there are few people in the civilized world but would gladly behold its sights if they could, so that this travel series cannot fail to make an especial appeal to every one. Landing at Jaffa (the Joppa of the Bible), we visit the House of Simon the Tanner, where Peter had his vision. Then across the plains to Jerusalem, where every spot has its sacred association. From Jerusalem to Bethlehem, where the Church of the Nativity stands upon the undoubted site of the stable where Christ was born. Then ancient Hebron, Bethany, the home of Mary and Martha; the Plain of Jericho, the Jordan and the Dead Sea; then north through Samaria, by the road which Abraham and all the patriarchs trod by Shechem and Mount Gilboa to Nazareth. We gaze at the scene at Mary's Well, feeling sure that here she and the boy Jesus often came for water, since wells do not change in Palestine, though buildings may. Cana of Galilee, the Sea of Tiberias and Mount Hermon each call to mind some event in Bible history, and we realize that here was the home of our Lord and these mountains and hills were familiar to his eyes, for by these roads he passed many times from village to village healing the sick and doing good everywhere.

Spain—Morocco.

JERUSALEM SERIES.

24 Stereographs.

Twice utterly destroyed and battered by seventeen sieges, the modern Jerusalem, of necessity, differs from the original city of David, yet here centers the interest of Christendom and thither thousands of pious pilgrims journey yearly to worship at its sacred shrines and behold its holy places. With this series as with a real visit does the vague mysticism surrounding the sacred city become definite reality and truth. Viewing the old city one feels himself carried back through centuries of fierce strife and bloodshed, justness and cruelty, luxury and magnificence and feels also that here is the cradle of the greatest ethical and moral system which has ever stirred the consciences of men. Here from the war-rocked city of the East emanated the spirit which controls all Christendom. Small wonder that blood-stained Calvary, the Mount of Olives, with the Bethany road stretching away over its summit, the pool of Siloam, the Mosques of Omar and El Aksa, where stood Solomon's temple, and many other scenes draw our minds to this historic, sacred city.

INDIA.

100 Stereographs.

Like no other country in the world is this wonderland of India. It is a vast assemblage of widely differing races and creeds. No less than 200 distinct dialects are spoken within its boundaries. Its population is three hundred million—nearly one-fifth of the entire human race. With eagerness and yet with a feeling of awe we look forward to our journey through this country, so ancient and still so new and alluring.

We land at Bombay, a great commercial city, strongly stamped with the modern civilization of England. Then pass to Udaipur, capital of the state of Mewar, beautifully situated on Lake Pichola, and Jaipur, the Oriental, the Asiatic, though a thriving commercial city. Here we are fortunate in witnessing the Mohammedan festival of Mahorem, including a sword dance and street parade.

After pausing at Alwar, with its lofty citadel, we arrive at ancient Delhi, the home and capital of those marvelously rich and lavish rulers, the Great Moguls. Here and again at Agra, we behold the incomparable architectural creations of those great monarchs, which are to-day, as they have been for centuries, the wonder of the world.

From the gem-encrusted walls of the Taj Mahal, we turn, passing through Fatehpur-Sikri and Gwalior, to Benares, the religious capital of India and the Mecca of pilgrims for centuries upon centuries. By the banks of the sacred Ganges are crowds of devout Hindus praying, bathing and drinking the holy water, which they believe assures them Paradise. By the Ganges, too, they burn their dead, and in the streets of the city are religious fanatics lying on beds of spikes.

Such sights render us glad to greet the lofty grandeur of the great Himalayas in the north, and after a brief stay in Calcutta, we end our journey through this strange, yet fascinating country.

BURMA AND CEYLON.

100 Stereographs.

In our journey through Burma we will stop en route at the Straits Settlement, which occupies the lower end of the Malay Peninsula; then go north to Rangoon, the capital of Burma; across the Gulf to Moulmein, an attractive city, noted for its timber trade, especially in teakwood. Outside Moulmein, the wonderful Paingoo Caves claim our attention, and we likewise pause to see the work of the Burmese women in the cigar manufactories of Mopoon.

Going north by rail, we visit Mandalay, with its beautiful Golden Monastery, Mingoon and the big bell of Burma, then down the Irrawaddy to stop at Pagan, where are the ruins of upwards of a thousand temples. Then on down the famous river to the Indian Ocean, where we take steamer for Ceylon.—This pear-shaped island at the southern end of India is said by the natives to be only forty miles from Paradise, and if wealth of tropic verdure and picturesque scenery constitute celestial qualities, we must concede their claim.

Colombo, the great seaport of the island, has all the attractions of tropical life and scenery, and especially are we interested in the native boats to be seen all along the palm-bordered shores either side the city. From the heat of Colombo, we are glad to pass to the temperate climate of the mountainous country where Kandy is located. We stop first at a lovely suburb called Peradeniya, to visit the finest Botanical Gardens in the world. Kandy is beautifully situated around an artificial lake and was the capital of Ceylon before the days of European occupation. Here is located the celebrated Temple of Buddha's Tooth, to the support of which even Burmese and Siamese Buddhists contribute annually. Herds of elephants roam the uplands around Kandy and their capture and training for use as beasts of burden forms one of the important industries of the island.

ELEPHANT SERIES.

12 Stereographs.

The great strength of the elephant, combined with unusual sagacity, renders him a valuable possession in Eastern countries, and not only does he do the work of many men, but no procession or parade is complete without the presence of these huge beasts. In this series we see him performing his various duties,—transporting the members of the Maharajah's household, at the service of the American traveler, working in the lumber yards of Burma, and after his toil is over for the day, enjoying his evening bath, marching home later with a huge palm log for his supper.

This series consists of the following stereographs: (1) 14022, (2) 14026, (3) 14109, (4) 14512, (5) 14516, (6) 14517, (7) 14560, (8) 14324, (9) 14325, (10) 14330, (11) 14332, (12) 14333.

CHINA SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

Our tour includes Hong Kong, half native and half European; Canton on the Pi Kiang, a river crowded with junks swarming with human life; Shanghai, with its temples and tea houses; Ta Ku, Chefoo and Tien-Tsin, the latter called the Key of the capital; and most wonderful of all, Peking, the capital. Within the massive walls is a second walled city which contains the temples, gardens and palaces of the officials of the Empire. A third wall encloses the Forbidden City, dwelling place of the Emperor, "the Son of Heaven." All the world knows that until Peking was occupied by the foreign powers, after the Boxer rebellion, no foreigner was allowed within the enclosure sacred to the Emperor, but we will pass the guarded portals and examine at leisure the Imperial Palace, even to the Dragon Throne itself.

Leaving Peking for a time, we journey north until we approach that mammoth work of all the ages, the Great Wall of China. Had the Chinese achieved nothing else, this colossal wall would stand as a monument to their ability. Farming scenes and bits of native life bring us back to the life of to-day and the realization that China has a great future before her, which should equal her illustrious past.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

Of the 1,600 islands which comprise the Philippine group, interest naturally centres in Luzon, the second largest and by far the most settled and civilized, and more particularly in Manila, the capital. We look with interest over the Bay, where Admiral Dewey's fleet annihilated in a few short hours the Spanish power which had dominated here for centuries. The Pasig River divides the city into the old walled town and the business section and suburbs, while numerous canals facilitate transportation to all parts of the city. The old town contains the principal public buildings, the palace and the cathedral. On the other hand, Binondo across the Pasig presents a busy commercial aspect worthy of any metropolis.

For many years Manila has been noted for its hemp products and we inspect with interest the various processes of this industry. Scarcely less important is the cigar trade, and in this occupation the women and girls take a prominent part.

Outside the city we visit the picturesque town of Ermita and thence into the country beyond to marvel at the primitive life of the native population and their rude methods of cultivating the soil. In the extreme south of the Island we visit the Province of Benguet, beautiful Mayon, the highest volcano and lastly Legaspi, a seaport named for the Spanish conqueror of the islands.

OUR PACIFIC POSSESSIONS SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

The interest in the new possessions of the United States in the Eastern hemisphere is constantly increasing, and this tour of the Philippines and Hawaii will be found most attractive. The many attractions of the principal city of the Philippines are brought in contrast with the queer sights of home life among the natives, showing their bamboo huts, a tiny schoolhouse of the most primitive type and other tropical scenes. In Honolulu fine public buildings and modern streets are found in the midst of a wealth of tropic beauty, while the rice fields and banana plantations give a graphic picture of the industries of the country.

JAPAN SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

Even jaded globe-trotters grow enthusiastic over the Land of the Mikado, and in this tour, we are not long in discovering ample reason.

We get our initial impression of the country at Yokohama, which is really only half Japanese and serves as a seaport to the capital city, Tokio. That we may attain things genuinely Japanese, we hasten to the latter city. Here we see the Jap at his work and his play; visit his temples and his toyshops; wonder at the exquisite perfection of his landscape gardening, and with him admire and almost worship the glorious wealth of floral bloom when the iris, the wistaria and the cherry in turn present their riot of flower and perfume.

After Tokio we are soon drawn to make a pilgrimage to the sacred mountain Fujiyama. Gazing at its snow-clad heights, we scarce wonder that the whole nation worships its lofty, majestic beauty. From Fuji and the mountain resorts near by, we descend to the plains and take an interest in agriculture, the tea plantations on the hillsides, the rice fields on the plains and the silk industry in its early stages from worm to cocoon.

A Japanese proverb says, "Do not use the word magnificent until you have seen Nikko," and thither we go to behold its glories of nature and art. Still further north we journey to the Island of Yezo, where dwells the aboriginal Jap, untouched by modern civilization.

Then south through the Inland Sea to Miyajima and Nara, to end our trip at Kyoto, famous for its magnificent bronzes, gold lacquer work and beautiful pottery and cloisonné.

- (1) 3905 Yokohama, looking east from the Bluff to the harbor.
- (2) 3900 Japanese ladies wandering amid the picturesque loveliness of an iris garden in June, near Yokohama.

TRIP AROUND THE WORLD SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

Until comparatively recent times it required three years to make a trip around the world. To-day, one may girdle the earth in less than eighty days. To be sure nothing is gained by such speed in travel except time, and we will journey in a more leisurely manner, endeavoring to profit by the acquaintance that may be made with many lands in a brief tour.

Sailing from New York, we visit the historic spots of England, Ireland and Scotland, then cross over to Scandinavia and Russia, and thence to the gay capital of France. Passing through Belgium, Holland and Germany, Switzerland and beautiful Italy, we soon arrive in Oriental Turkey, after which we journey through classic Greece, Egypt, Land of the Pharaohs, and Palestine with its sacred associations. The far East, including China, Japan and our own possessions in the Philippines and Hawaii next claim attention, and we return home via the Pacific Coast of California, visiting Canada and the most important sights of our own vast and varied country en route.

TRIP TO EUROPE SERIES.

100 Stereographs.

Who does not long to see the wonders and historic spots of Europe; to feel the thrill of the invigorating salt breezes of the Atlantic; to tread the old Abbeys; to stand on fields which once shook with the surge and roar of battling armies; to drink in Italy's balmy air; to jaunt over the Emerald Isle; to view the rugged granite cliffs of Scandinavia, coming back again to the gay life of Paris; to listen to the song of the beautiful blue Danube and feel the power of old Athens and Sparta; to mix with strange people, and learn strange customs; to see strange sights and to gather new knowledge. This stereograph series puts you into these very places, makes you feel the same spirit and see the same sights and receive the same impressions which the tourist in his hurried passage enjoys all too briefly.

MID-OCEAN AND MARINE.

12 Stereographs.

This series is an entire novelty and of great interest, as representing the scenes of an ocean voyage. The aspects of the mighty deep in a storm and calm, and the immense swarms of sea gulls which surround a ship nearing land at Gibraltar, are sights familiar to ocean travelers, but none the less picturesque as here presented.

MARTINIQUE SERIES.

18 Stereographs.

The terrible catastrophe which overtook the city of St. Pierre on May 8th, 1902, was the most awful in its results of any convulsion of nature. It can be compared only to the eruption of Vesuvius which buried Pompeii and adjacent towns in the first century, but in the case of the Mont Pelee disaster the deadly gases which resulted from the explosion which tore out the side of the mountain, brought instant death and spared scarce a victim of all the inhabitants of the city. The wrecked city, with its ghastly ruins, and the still smoking mountain which wrought such frightful destruction are shown in this series with absolute realism and fidelity.

- 8201 (1) Mont Pelee, the terrible destroyer of St. Pierre, at the beginning of a secondary eruption following that of May 8th, 1902.
- 8202 (2) General view of St. Pierre, Harbor and Mont Pelee, after the eruption of May 8th, 1902.
- 8203 (3) Statue of the Virgin, showing statue hurled 40 feet from base by the fury of Mont Pelee.

- 8216 (16) Grim and threatening Mont Pelee from the Bay, the portion of St. Pierre most deeply buried in volcanic mud and ashes.
- 8217 (17) The awful seething crater of Mont Pelee,—from the side opening near centre came the dreadful eruption of May 8th, 1902.
- 8218 (18) St. Pierre refugees in the streets of Fort de France, poverty stricken natives bereft of home and all they possessed.

SAN FRANCISCO DISASTER SERIES.

18 Stereographs.

Our history records no such complete destruction of a magnificent city with such big attendant losses as that which befell the metropolis of the Pacific Coast on the 18th of April, 1906. Without warning the all powerful elemental forces of Nature burst upon the doomed city. Thousands of families were made homeless in a night. Millions of dollars worth of property were destroyed. The whole world paused for the time aghast. The heart of its people was touched. Swift succor was hurried to the stricken people; the scenes of desolation were cleared away and a new city now looks out through the Golden Gate.

Our Stereographs depict this most terrible catastrophe accurately, clearly and adequately. Scenes of desolation and destruction, awful rents in the earth's crust, street upheavals, twisted buildings, dismantled homes, magnificent structures gutted by fire, ruins of palatial residences, wrecked trolleys, suffering refugees,—all these and more form the permanent record of that awful 18th of April.

LOUISIANA PURCHASE EXPOSITION.

100 Stereographs.

The Louisiana Purchase Exposition was the largest and most comprehensive the world has ever seen. It covered an area of 1,200 acres, almost double that of Chicago, and had under roof 128 acres, while Chicago had but 82.

The main plan of the Exposition was in the shape of a fan, avenues radiating from Festival Hall, which was the central point of the grounds. The exhibit palaces were beautiful and varied in architecture. At night when illuminated with countless rows of electric lights the scene was almost fairyland itself.

Our series covers all the important and most interesting features of the Fair. To heighten the illusion of an actual tour, we have divided the series into six days, covering each day such points as a person would be likely to see. Two nights are spent at the Exposition to view the illuminations. Concluding the series are some interesting sights, such as President Roosevelt's visit and St. Louis Day, which few people would see if actually visiting the Exposition.
